Task 1 Questions 1-12

You are going to read an article in which people talk about inventions.
For questions 1-12, choose from the people A-F.
Mark your answer on the answer sheet.
There is an example at the beginning (0).

What would you invent to make the world a better place?

A Anna	B Benjamin
A piece of technology I'd invent would revolve around a theory I have on cellular immunity. It's a theory that needs more research and medical backing before I go about spreading the idea to the world. My dad sparked the idea in me and I'm planning to read up on the subject in journals. I'd like a leading cell research foundation to be my partner in making my invention a success. Since my father runs a well-known pharmaceutical company, which has pioneered many drugs and projects already, financial help is guaranteed.	If I were to address any problem in the world it would be weight. I would invent a law that would mandate exercise with nutritional education and it would be incorporated into school systems and in the workplace. My plan is to study law, get into parliament and thus make a career out of my idea. My family would support me in finding business partners. I'd choose those with an impressive record of helping children and adults learn how to live healthily. Health is, in my opinion, the first step to a better and happier world.
C Chris	D Daphne
My story goes back to my childhood. I wanted to know everything and I was fascinated by people who were just a step away from big discoveries. The device I would invent would be integrated in the human brain, combining biological and technological functions. The more we receive information, the better we process it and this would speed up our scientific discoveries. My Progressor would make life interesting and humans smarter without ethical concerns. You see, the faster we progress in science, the easier we will adapt to new situations.	To show how much I care I would invent a machine that clones food so that everyone, not only children in Africa, is free of hunger. I would join together with acclaimed scientists to try and figure out how to make my machine. I have already dug into scientific literature about cloning, but I still have doubts about whether it is ethical. To get funding and publicity, I would team up with celebrities or politicians. The equipment, chemicals and labs would cost huge amounts, but the project should be profitable enough to keep itself running because my new device could save millions of lives.

Reading Paper

E Ebony	F Ferdinand
I would try to invent a little toy that every kid in the world would want and could get. My invention would hopefully make everyone realise that humans aren't as hard as nails. My mind is set on organizing a volunteer group working with recycled materials and volunteer engineers to produce this toy, and this initiative would spread to local communities enabling free worldwide distribution. I believe it would send a good message and motivate others to follow in my footsteps.	My invention fits into the field of nanotechnology, which many people are suspicious about. My robot would help people manage their time better. It dawned on me while I was reading a novel for school. I would need a global computer corporation on my side. They make billions of dollars and would not only be able to fund my research but they would also be able to spend even more on advertising the device to get a return on their investment.

Task 2

Questions 13-18

Read the text below.

For questions 13-18, choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D).

Mark your answer on the answer sheet.

Husky sledding in the Arctic

Having prepared myself for the idea that, except for a few hours of twilight at midday, I'd seen the last of the sun for a week, it was only on landing in Lapland that I realised a certainty about travelling to this part of the Arctic Circle at Christmas. Before I was out of the arrivals hall I'd been sung at by elves and seen several English children running around, their father on his knees, pretending to be a reindeer. It was Santa Mayhem. I'd been warned that Finland had a crazy edge to it. I hadn't realised it was the visitors that were mad.

At the hotel, steering clear of French tots having their photo taken with wooden cut-outs of a husky and Santa, I walk down to the river that marks the border with Sweden. Ice covers all but the centre of the river. Following the dark bank using my head torch, I can hear the howls of huskies. The cold creeps around my hair, caressing each follicle with icy fingertips. My breathing slows. I will leave the sugary horror behind and enter the primeval world of man, dogs and frozen wilderness.

In the morning darkness, I join Andrea, Eva, Rozie, Susie, and Meku, our guide. No one knows each other. We follow the hurricane of howling and head for the canine yard. My five four-legged companions are Gaudi, Coco, Shakira, Dior and Armani. It's Milan 2010 all over again. The mental image of brightly lit Italian catwalks disappears when Armani pounces on Dior with a snarl. Dior goes for the ear, but Armani responds with a neck grip. A bellow from Gaudi separates them.

Now they are springing up and down in their leather harnesses, desperate to be moving. I'm grateful for the rope tied to a pole in the snow and the hooks embedded in ice at our feet. The idea is that you stand on the runners at the back of the sledge, holding on to a wooden bar. Meku jams her brake, a toothed metal bar at her feet, into the ice. Then she releases the rope and lifts the snow hooks. She gives a signal, then goes.

When we stop, there is frost on our eyelashes. 'I have some conflict about this,' says Eva as we remove their harnesses and chain the dogs, a routine to be repeated every day. No one else seems to mind. There is firewood to fetch and light in the cabin. Water from a hole in the ice is carried in dustbins for the sauna. Then the dogs have meat soup with dry food. Snacks are cut for them for the next day. The thermometer is hovering around -25°C.

On our third day we meet reindeer herders. They tend to the terrified reindeer with few words. The animals react with small grunting noises. We spot squirrels and Siberian jays. The days slip away all too quickly. The dogs begin to know us. Gaudi stops glancing around to remind me to jump off on steep hills. I find I can balance on the runners and ride with less difficulty. The group has melded well. Working with the dogs has given us a shared purpose. The good humour and enthusiasm of the animals have rubbed off.

What I wish I had known when I was younger

I recently celebrated another year of life and I began to contemplate the lessons I would pass on to my younger self. (0) _____. So, here's what I wish I had known when I was younger.

We worry too much about what people around us think of us, our decisions and our actions. (19) _____. Everyone around you has an opinion, but in reality, others' opinions of you are based more on their history and perceptions than anything you're actually doing. So ask for feedback, but rely on your own assessment of yourself rather than that of others.

Clinging to past mistakes, if only in your own eyes, holds you back from moving forward in your life. (20) _____. Consider them little things that you need to let roll off your back. Otherwise, they will keep you stuck in the past. Don't waste your energy dwelling on irredeemable slights, resentment or disappointment. Let go of previous insults, criticisms, setbacks. They only weigh you down.

To succeed in what you have planned, you need to put your shoulder to the wheel. You may have to trudge through the trenches of planning, building, refining, redefining, moving up, down or out before you get to the place where success clicks. (21) _____. And remember – failure is the mother of all success.

Contrary to what you have been sold by the 'lifestyles of the wealthy and happy' illusion, money does not equate to happiness. (22) _____. It is simply a currency that allows you to eat, dress and live. Satisfaction with a job well done, putting effort into building friendships, contributing to something worthwhile and finding something you enjoy doing are more motivating goals and certainly lend themselves to a happier and less stressful life.

We have so much to do, so much to accomplish and it feels as though we have to be in a hurry to get there. However, it is not a race. It is likely that you will live upwards of 80 years. (23) _____. But if you try to do everything at once, you will, at best, not have time to enjoy it, and, at worst, burn out and damage your health and relationships.

Celebrate the happy moments, big and small. Search for the lesson and opportunity for growth in what is difficult. Give helpful encouragement and build a network of friendly support. (24) _____. But don't let them colour your experience. If you view the world around you and life's challenges through the lens of goodness, then you will find life much more enjoyable. Life is serious – and sometimes awful – but you can still be upbeat and hopeful. Otherwise, what's the point?

- A Therefore, when you hear about an overnight triumph story, be aware of all of the work that came before.
- B If it does not bring you happiness, it will, at worst, help you be miserable in comfort.
- C That is more than a fine stretch to fit a whole host of wonderful endeavours into your life.
- D If you waste too much time seeking validation, respect or approval from them, you won't have time to accomplish all that you desire.
- E Consequently, such thoughts serve the purpose of knocking down the obstacles in your way.
- F Evidently, dishonesty, disrespect, unhappiness and evil exist and you will have to deal with them.
- G This goes to say that you can't influence unmet expectations, bygone difficult situations and failures.
- H Nor does it insulate you from pain, suffering and conflict or improve your relationships with those around you.
- I Whether you are young or young at heart, it is never too late to change – or incorporate some new (and better) practices into your everyday life.

Questions 25-32

Read the text below.

For questions 25-32, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) that best completes each sentence.

Mark your answer on the answer sheet.

There is an example at the beginning (0).

A wrong calculation?

Glaciologists fear they may have seriously underestimated the potential for melting ice sheets to contribute to catastrophic sea-level rises of a metre or more (0) _____ the coming decades. The ice sheets of Greenland and Antarctica would raise sea levels by 65 metres if they (25) _____ completely. However, a survey (26) _____ that most glaciologists believe melting could be more rapid and severe than previously estimated. They believe that the melting of the ice sheets would raise the average global sea level by 29 cm in this century (27) _____. But there is a chance of it increasing even (28) _____ by a catastrophic 84 cm. This would take the total sea-level increase to (29) _____ over 100 centimetres. The impact of a metre rise in (30) _____ sea level would potentially be severe, resulting in the forced displacement of millions of people this century.

Rising sea levels are one of the greatest uncertainties of climate change. A warmer world not only causes oceans to expand thermally (31) _____ additionally leads to faster melting of mountain glaciers and some regions of the polar ice sheets. However, glaciologists are uncertain about how the ice sheets will respond (32) _____ increasing global temperatures and climate change. One of the most challenging issues facing glaciologists is to work out how much of the melting is due to natural variation and how much is due to emissions of man-made greenhouse gasses.
